KEYWORDS

Place keywords

ABSTRACT

Here you place the abstract (100-200 words).
Do NOT use the standard `abstract` environment.

SECTIONS

Use the `\Section{SECTION TITLE}` command and NOT the standard `\section{}` command.

Subsections

Use the `\Subsection{Subsection Title}` command and NOT the standard `\subsection{}` command.

EQUATIONS

Use the standard `eqnarray` environment for generating equations. For example...

$$x(t) = A(t)x(t) + w(t) + u(t) \quad (1)$$

Equation (1) gives the ...

TABLES and FIGURES

For tables use the standard `tabular` environment and for figures the standard `figure` environment. Information for those can be obtained from any \LaTeX handbook.

FOOTNOTES AND ENDNOTES

Do not use footnotes or endnotes.

HEADERS OR FOOTERS

Do NOT use or set ANY headers or footers.

REFERENCES

Use the standard `thebibliography` environment, along with the `apalike` bibliography style, as demonstrated in the following examples.

We improve the results of (Barger et al., 1996) and at some extend the results of (Hubble, 1936)...

NOTE: Use the `\citep{}` command and NOT the standard `\cite{}` command. Also make sure to include the `natbib.sty` style file (provided with the ECMS package).

For those using BIBTEX, they can look at the `example.bib` file (provided with the the ECMS package) for an example of a bib file, and instead of using the `thebibliography` environment they should use the `\bibliography{bibfile}` command.
